"Furies in St. James Park": Batty v. City of Toronto and the Occupy Movement
Sponsored by the Office of the Master, Vanier College

Presented by: Professor Roger Fisher

The Occupy Movement ended abruptly in Toronto on November 21, 2011, after a court ruled in Batty v. City of Toronto that protestors have no right under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms to assemble in a public place without being subject to city by-laws and removal orders. The threat to the civic order posed by the Occupy Movement is as ancient as the one depicted in Aeschylus’ play The Furies, and the similar outcome in Batty v. City of Toronto suggests that in a Greek myth and in Charter litigation, “law is prophecy and nothing more” (Oliver Wendell Holmes).

Canada's One Percent
Co-sponsored by Office of the Master, McLaughlin and Office of the Master, Vanier College

Presented by: Professor George Fallis

The share of income going to Canada's top one percent has risen sharply since the mid 1980s. Who are Canada's one percent? What explains their rising share? How does the rising one percent compare to other measures of income inequality, such as poverty? Is the rising one percent a problem, and if so, what can be done about it?

Performance Evaluation in Canadian Public Organizations: How Far Have We Come?

Submission deadline: November 30, 2013
Submitting government programs to evaluation is one way to inform elected officials and the public about whether programs are achieving touted goals in a fair and efficient manner. Several factors—legislative, political, organizational and scientific—can explain the inclusion of performance evaluation in the political agenda and its implementation in public organizations. Calls for innovative practices, marginal changes and continuity in programs can emerge from performance evaluations. There are, however, potential negative consequences to performance evaluation, such as (a) feelings of inability to develop performance management, approaches and measurement; (b) cynicism and apathy in the public service regarding the concept of “performance” and the prospect of improving organizational performance; (c) unease about stronger accountability relationships; and (d) lack of concordance between the political and legislative discourses that promote performance, and actual administrative practices.

Knowledge of performance-evaluation practice in the public sector is widely dispersed across fields like municipal affairs, health care and education. In Canada, as elsewhere, performance evaluation is a complex topic of interest fed by various scientific disciplines (e.g., public administration, management, economics and political science). Areas of investigation include rationale, theory, modeling, management, measurement, implementation, utilization and performance value. In recent years, Canadian Public Administration, the refereed scholarly publication of the Institute of Public Administration of Canada, has communicated findings on performance evaluation practices, focusing specifically on management, accountability and human resources. However, there have been few in-depth, critical analyses of related factors such as complexity, innovation, change and the role of discourse in developing and integrating these practices into decision-making processes.

Canadian Public Administration invites academics and practitioners from Canada and abroad to submit papers in English or French, which explore the development, practice and consequences of performance evaluation in various sectors in Canada (e.g., health administration, education administration, municipal management, social services). The goal is to generate a dialogue among researchers, decision makers and professionals about the state of practice with performance evaluation in public administration. Submitted papers should document practice in one or more program areas in public administration in Canada and explain 1) how performance evaluation is used; and 2) the effects of performance evaluation on interventions, organizations and governance.

Potential contributors could choose to respond to the following questions:
• a) At the international level, what is the state of the art of performance evaluation?
• b) What are the current practices of performance evaluation in Canadian public organizations and what are the challenges for practitioners?
• c) What is the gold standard, if there is one, for performance evaluation in Canada and Quebec? The guest editors will also consider other relevant topics (examples include performance management, performance measurement, and related topics).

To submit a paper
Papers should be submitted to Canadian Public Administration via the journal’s online manuscript tracking system at http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/capa no later than November 30, 2013.

All submissions will undergo peer review by leading experts in the field prior to final acceptance.

Accepted papers will be published in September 2014 (Volume 57, issue 3). For information on the submission process, please contact Christy Paddick, Managing Editor at cpaddick@ipac.ca. To discuss ideas for potential papers, please contact Nathalie Dubois, a guest editor of this theme issue at ndubois@santepub-mtl.qc.ca

World Social Science Prizes
Stein Rokkan Prize

The Stein Rokkan Prize for Comparative Social Science Research is awarded for very substantial and original contributions in comparative social science research. Submissions can be either an unpublished manuscript of book length, or a printed book, or collected works published no more than two years before the award year. Laureates receive a diploma and a cash prize, awarded every year and awarded during an ISSC Executive Committee or General Assembly meeting, or at a World Social Science Forum, where laureates are usually asked to deliver a public lecture.

The Stein Rokkan Prize was first awarded in 1981 in honour of Stein Rokkan (1921-1979), who pioneered this type of research. Rokkan was a Norwegian political scientist and sociologist. The Prize was instituted jointly by the ISSC and the Conjunto Universitario Candido Mendes in Brazil, and until 2002 the Prize was awarded jointly by both institutions.

Since 2008, and thanks to the generous support of the University of Bergen, where Stein Rokkan was professor of comparative politics, the Stein Rokkan Prize amounts to $US 5000 and is awarded on an annual basis with and is presented jointly with the European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR).

For more information, visit: http://www.worldsocialscience.org/activities/scientific-prizes/stein-rokkan/

Nomination Procedure
The prize is open to candidates from all social science disciplines; however ECPR Executive Committee members, the Director and ECPR editors are excluded from being nominated.

The work should be a very substantial and original contribution in comparative social science research. The work can be an unpublished manuscript of book length, a printed book, or collected works published within the two years preceding the award ceremony. Edited volumes are not eligible. The work should preferably be in English; however a submission written in another language can be nominated as long as it is accompanied by an English summary of the work.

Submissions must include: the author's name; book title; year of publication (if published); and the name of the person who makes the nomination. This must be sent together with a formal letter in support of the nomination from the head of a research institution, university department or research centre. This letter must include information on the nominee, for example an outline of their work, research interests, etc. and support of their candidacy for this award.

Submissions should be sent by email to Louise Soper (lhawk@essex.ac.uk) at the ECPR before the deadline of 15 February 2014. After 15 February 2014 all nominees will be informed and required to forward four hard copies of their manuscript to the Jury for consideration. Please note that electronic versions will not be accepted and submissions unfortunately cannot be returned. Submissions should be received by all four members of the jury by 15 March 2014.

The 2014 prize jury comprises:
- Klaus Goetz, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München (Chair)
- Ingrid van Biezen, Universiteit Leiden
- Stein Kuhnle, University of Bergen and Hertie School of Governance
- Manfred Schmidt, Universität Heidelberg

Transnational Migration and Changing Citizenship Regimes:
Workshop at the University of Ottawa, March 21, 2014

Citizenship regimes are shifting insignificant ways in response to the global movement of people, in ways that serve to encourage some migrants and discourage others. This workshop will consider the ways in which citizenship regimes have shifted – in particular, whether they have become more or less compatible with democratic principles (understood as a commitment to inclusive equality) – in response to the transnational movement of people. We will consider a range of examples of changing citizenship regimes, including (but not limited to):

a) the changes in developed states who are competing for skilled migrants to such an extent that they shift their citizenship regimes to make it easier for skilled migrants (but not unskilled migrants who are, equally, needed to fill acute labour shortages in developed states) to earn citizenship;
b) the changes in developed states to make it more difficult for even genuine refugees to both claim asylum and, where their claims are recognized as legitimate, to gain permanent resettlement outside of their country of origin;
c) the imposition of citizenship tests and other pre-naturalization demands, often directed at particular immigrant groups, intended to make the acquisition of citizenship more challenging.

Confirmed speakers:
Avigail Eisenberg, University of Victoria, Canada
Peter Niesen, Hamburg University, Germany
Steven On, National Sun Yat-sen University, Kaohsiung, Taiwan
David Owen, University of Southampton, UK

Abstracts (250 words) should be sent by November 30, 2013 to the following addresses:
Patti T Lenard (Patti.Lenard@Uottawa.ca)
Christine Straehle (christine.straehle@uottawa.ca)

Funding/Scholarships

Access York is pleased to announce:
The York University Accessibility Fund (YUAF)

A York University-wide fund has been established to make the York community (at both the Keele and Glendon campuses) more accessible to persons with disabilities. This fund is administered by the Office of the Vice-President Finance & Administration.

Who Can Apply
- All members of the York University community - individual students, faculty and staff members; academic and administrative units; clubs, associations, organizations, and college councils – are eligible to apply.

Application Process
- For an application to be advanced, it must be sponsored by the Administrative Head of the relevant Academic and Non-academic Units or Organization (or designate). [1] Note that administrative heads are not being asked to evaluate the merit of the application.
- Applications for funding shall be submitted in writing by the sponsoring organization, Faculty or office, via the YUAF Application Form, and shall outline in detail the nature of the request and the approximate costs.
- Applications submitted will be reviewed by an Adjudication committee comprised of the following participants or their designates: Senior Executive Officer, Vice-President Finance and Administration (Chair); Vice-Provost Students; AODA Coordinator; Access York Vice-Chair Faculty/Staff; Access York Student Representative; other members when request-specific advice is required.
- Time frame for responses: Typical turnaround time: 4–6 weeks; however, shorter response intervals will be considered for time-sensitive applications.

Applications for the first round of this year's adjudication will be accepted until January 31st, 2014.

1. Categories of Expenditures
- This central fund should be seen as a means of supplementing costs, rather than covering all costs, whenever possible.
- Requests will be considered only after all other avenues for funding have been explored.
- All and any equipment purchased remains the property of York University, normally under the auspices of the sponsoring office/department/unit.

a. Applications may include requests for:
- Classroom and Practicum Technological Equipment and Supports (e.g., assistive devices, software, or other equipment purchased by an Administrative Unit and provided on a loaner basis.
- Disability Awareness and Education (e.g., activities to promote and support on-going education within the York Community, such as funding to create an online awareness guide for course instructors)
- Supplemented Support for Extra/Co-curricular and Other Out-of-Class Activities (i.e., support services for participants attending these activities)
- Supplemented Support for Conferences Hosted by the University (i.e., support services for participants)

- Support for York students with disabilities presenting at conferences hosted elsewhere.
- Other requests

b. Applications may not include requests for:
- Expenses that should be otherwise supported through MTCU funding for students with disabilities.
- Renovations and retrofits to the built environment (e.g., classrooms, washrooms, residences) Note: On rare occasions, physical access requests will be considered, dependent on funds.

2. Criteria for Assessing Funding Requests:
- Does the request eliminate a barrier?
- Does the request result in greater participation by persons with disabilities?
- Does the request promote awareness of disability related issues?
- Will the request result in education that is more accessible?
- Will the request have a lasting effect on the University?
- Have all other avenues for funding been sufficiently explored?

Requests that relate to student accessibility, both on and off campus, shall be given priority.

CNC/CODATA's Sangster Award for Graduate students (or recent grads)

The award was established by Dr. James Sangster of Sangster Research Laboratories, who has been a long time member and supporter of CODATA at both national and international levels. It is targeted at graduate students whose field of study supports the goals and activities of CODATA, namely to help foster and advance science and technology through developing and sharing knowledge about data and the activities that work with data. Applications for the award were received from graduate students attending universities across Canada and highlighted that data activities within Canada are in a very healthy shape for the future.

This award, valued at Can. $3000, will enable a graduate student enrolled in a Canadian University, or a graduate who has completed his or her graduate degree within 3 years of the application deadline, to attend and present their work at the 24th International CODATA Conference, Data Challenges for Global Sustainability / Future Earth, 2 - 5 November, 2014, New Delhi, India. It is expected that the award winner’s field of study will support the general objectives of CODATA, namely, to help foster and advance science and technology through developing and sharing knowledge about data and the activities that work with data.

Opportunity for undergraduate students to become co-editors of an e-Journal

I am a student currently in my 4th year at the Royal Military College in Canada and enrolled in the Political Sciences Program.

I, as well as a colleague, would like to respectfully request your cooperation in an endeavor of ours. We are currently co-editors in an undergraduate publication called Federalism-e. This publication aims to regroup essays made by undergraduate level students regarding federalism, federal politics in Canada, or federal politics abroad. Our publication aims to be fully bilingual so texts in both official languages (French and English) are accepted.

We thus require submissions from undergraduate students from all around the country and the World. The process is as follows: After constituting an editorial board, we solicit submission from different universities. The submissions can be original work or can be essays produced by the students for a class as long as the main theme is federalism. These submissions are then handed over to the editorial board (with names removed, following a double blind system) and extensively reviewed. Drafts are then sent back to the students for corrections and so on until a satisfactory article has been submitted.

We need both contributors as well as students to act as members of the editorial board. Note that students can act as both (they will of course not be given their own work to review). Thus, taking into account your position, we humbly ask that you pass on the message to your students and have them contact me if they are interested. I would ask you to encourage your students to undertake such an endeavor as it is an excellent exercise in academic journal writing and a good opportunity to get work published at the national level.

I thank you for reading this. Do not hesitate to pass my email address directly to your students and know that I remain available for any questions you or anyone else might have through this email address s26181@rmc.ca or by phone at 289-456-1890.

Regards, Travis Lane

NOVEMBER EVENTS AT THE CAREER CENTRE

The Career Centre is pleased to provide you with a PDF of the calendar of activities for the month of November 2013. Alternatively, you may refer to our online calendar.

The annual Volunteer Fair is taking place on November 14th from 10am-3pm in Vari Hall. This is a great opportunity for students to get involved, build career-related skills, gain experience, and meet people who share their interest in making a difference. Students can find out which organizations are attending and read about their volunteer opportunities on the Volunteer Fair website.

Immediately following the Volunteer Fair, the Career Centre will be hosting a Career Conversations panel discussion with York alumni entitled, Discovering Careers in NGOs, Human Rights and Social Justice Organizations. This panel, taking place from 3:30-5:30pm in the Harry Crowe Room, 109 Atkinson College, is a great opportunity for students to connect with professionals and get the inside scoop on what it's really like to work in this field.

The Career Centre will be co-hosting two more Career Conversations panels in November: Discovering Careers in Technology (in partnership with the Centre for Student Success, LAPS) on November 5th and What Can I Do with a Degree in Humanities? (in partnership with the Department of Humanities, LAPS) on November 13th. These panels will feature York alumni working in various roles within organizations as diverse as IBM, Metrolinx, Maclean’s and Rinx Entertainment.

The Environmental Studies Internship Program (ESIP) will also be hosting a panel discussion on November 14th from 2:00-4:00 pm in 248 HNES. During this panel discussion, Unearthing Green Internships, students will hear inspiring stories and learn from the experiences of former ESIP interns.

This time of year, many students are applying to further studies. The Career Centre’s Further Education Workshop Series will be offered throughout the month of November. These five, highly targeted, one-hour workshops, are designed to address the unique issues and concerns that students might have about their applications to further studies.

Students can register for these activities through the Career Centre's online system.

CAREER CONVERSATIONS PANEL SERIES PRESENTS:

Hosted by the Career Centre
The Career Conversations Series, sponsored by York Alumni Relations, is a series of panel and webinar discussions that focus on various fields of interest and are designed to provide students with an opportunity to connect with employers and alumni; gain insight into areas of interest to them; and get advice from professionals currently working in the field. During these sessions Employer and Alumni participants will address and discuss questions from a Career Centre moderator, students and new graduates on topics such as:

- their personal career paths
- how their university education is relevant to their particular position
- the realities of the sectors they work in
- strategies for entering the sector
- opportunities within their fields
- resources for connecting with professionals in that field

Station Contractor Begins Work for York University Station November 2013

Work will soon begin on the next phase of station construction with the mobilization by the York University Subway Station contractor EllisDon. EllisDon will begin bringing equipment and forces onto the York University Station construction site as they gear up for full mobilization and the next number of years of subway station construction. The site is located between York Boulevard and the Kanef Tower/Archives Building and Ian Macdonald Boulevard near the Seymour Schulich Building. Work will take place in the Contractor Work Zones and Station construction areas on the map below.

Early mobilization work includes:

- Starting on November 2, 2013, water will be pumped out of the station box. There will be some construction related noise related to the pumping.
- Contractor site preparation which includes extending the construction site fencing on Ian Macdonald Boulevard across from the Archives of Ontario.
- Mobilization of heavy equipment on to the site.

The erection of two (2) tower cranes on the east and west ends of the construction site (red circles on map).
