McLAUGHLIN COLLEGE

As part of our popular Lunch Talk series McLaughlin College Proudly Presents:

"Should Corporations Punish Employees for Off-Duty Wrongs? Or, Should Murder Be a Firing Offence?"

Presented by:

Chris MacDonald

"Is it ethically right for employers to punish employees for bad deeds committed off the job? When an individual's bad deeds become public, the public often demands and then celebrates retribution by their employer. This presentation explores the sources and justification for such demands, along with reasons why we ought to be cautious about celebrating such action by employers."

CHRIS MACDONALD teaches ethics and critical thinking at Ryerson University's Ted Rogers School of Management. A philosopher by training, he is Chair of the Law & Business department, and Director of the Ted Rogers Leadership Centre. His current research is focused on the epistemic obligations of corporate directors, and the relationship between cynicism and unethical behaviour within organizations.

2021 Census of Population Content Consultation

Statistics Canada is conducting a public consultation on the 2021 Census of Population. An invitation to participate in the online consultation was sent on September 11, 2017.

The online consultation questionnaire is designed to gather information about how and why Canadians use census data, the type of information they believe should be available from the census, and details of other data sources that could be used to supplement or replace current census content. The information gathered during consultation will help Statistics Canada assess the data needs of Canadians and evaluate whether emerging social and economic trends are reflected. Your feedback will help Statistics Canada determine the content of the 2021 Census of Population questionnaire.

Statistics Canada is committed to respecting the privacy of consultation participants. All personal information collected by the agency is protected by the Privacy Act.

Comments collected during the consultation may be published anonymously in the 2021 Census of Population Content Consultation Report, which will be available on the Statistics Canada website in the fall of 2019.
