

Our SPPA Student Profiles are back for Winter 2018!

This week we are pleased to present Mandeq Jama,
4th year Bachelor of Public Administration (BPA) Honours

---

When I was trying to figure out what I wanted to learn after high school, to be honest, public administration didn't really cross my mind. It was my father who suggested I should take it given my general interest in governance and policy.

So I took it, knowing only little of what I was heading into.

In my first year, I was initially taken back by the range of courses I took. At that point, I was taking courses ranging from macroeconomics to public law. Personally, I enjoy learning about as many different things as I can, so this degree was a treat to pursue. Also, public administration is a multidisciplinary field, so it makes sense that it would require a multidisciplinary education. If you're more into essays than numbers, you get to strengthen your skills on the latter (and the same thing goes if you're the opposite).

Beyond classes, the School of Public Policy and Administration offers students the opportunity to take a practicum in their 4th year. Here you have access to real experience working alongside those in government ministries or agencies, learning how the public service really runs. The point of the practicum is to gain experience and to figure out where you see yourself in the future along the way. Something no regular class can really teach.

So that's what you get, a balance between experience and class, theory and technical education. Where you need both, you get both.

Good luck!

YorkU Economics Review

Econalyze

Welcome to the York University's Economics Review - Econalyze. We are excited to launch the 1st undergraduate journal at the Department of Economics. Econalyze is an open-access and peer-reviewed online journal dedicated to showcase intellectual discussion related to economics and economic policy by highlighting rigorous and original work including interdisciplinary approaches and perspectives.

As we are getting ready for our call for papers in Spring 2018, we invite you to connect with us and would appreciate if you share this initiative among your networks. Please stay in touch and help us distribute our call for papers which we will be forwarding in the upcoming months. We have openings for editors, faculty advisors, managing editor, selection committee if you would like to get involved Please do not hesitate to reach out to us if you have any questions at econalyze.ca@gmail.com.

Carleton University's Institute on the Ethics of Research with Indigenous People (CUIERIP) will hold its 5th annual week-long summer program in Ottawa from June 3rd to the 8th, 2018. It is a six-day immersive experience devoted to learning about good practices in ethical research with First Nations, Metis and Inuit communities.

CUIERIP's mission is to provide a collaborative and safe learning environment for faculty, students, community members, and professionals working on Indigenous issues and research ethics.

CUIERIP is led by Carleton Faculty, research ethics professionals and community leaders. Presiding Elders guide all participants.

CUIERIP's 2018 theme: "Story keeping and the story bundle". Story bundles, a concept that pertains to Western and Indigenous ethical considerations around being a story-keeper, or more specifically, the person who brings the experiences and stories of others forward. During the week-long institute, we will consider the distinctions between different types of stories, the protocols/ethical considerations around who can carry/disseminate stories, historic and contemporary examples of storykeepers, examples of how carriers adapt to the evolution of ever-changing stories, what researchers need in their storybundles, and how a story bundle is developed, maintained and utilized.

Registration for the 2018 Institute is now open.
